

Certain names have suddenly become popular out of nowhere or have jumped up the ranks in popularity in a short timespans. I decided to use the program to find some popular names and correlate them with pop culture trends that may have led to their popularity. Of course, famous actors like Scarlett Johanson and Mila Kunis made the list, but I noticed some other name patterns. Claire has an interesting rise from 1970 to 1980. This may have been caused by the character Claire in The Breakfast Club, or by the retail company Claire's, which expanded its locations in America during the 80s. Another jewelry company, Tiffany & Co. became popular in the 50s and the movie Breakfast at Tiffany's in 1961 made the name Tiffany have such a sudden rise. Samantha from Bewitched became popular during the 60s. While researching, some other interesting names I found were Malia, for Malia Obama, and Khloe, for Khloe Kardashian.
